Cantillon was once very seriously considered for the position of Cleveland's manager, and he is mmensely popular here. TECHNICAL BOYS OUTROWED BLUE AND GRAY

The Georgetown Preparatory School eight-oared crew was defeated in a close race yesterday afternoon by the Technical High School eight over the mile and a half rowing course on the Potomac river. The Preps' crew displayed more endurance and skill than their rivals, but the weight and strength of the latter won out for them in the last quarter in spite of the fact that two of the crew were "seeing black" as the end was being neared.

Both crews suffered from bad steering on the part of their coxswains, and this dis-advantage almost lost the race for the High advantage almost lost the race for the High School boys, and it was by a series of powerful sports to the finish line that they managed to shove their boat across the line about a quarter of a length ahead of the Preps. After the race there was considerable talk on the part of the Blue and Gray supporters that the covswain of their Gray supporters that the coxswain of their eight understood that finish was at the west end of the float of the Potomac boathouse instead of a short distance to the east of the float, and because of this misunderstanding he eased up his crew too seen and allowed the Techs to pass him. However no kick was registered with the referee or judges. This let up at the west end of the float was noticeable, and the spectators aboard the steamer Bartholdi, which was following the server Bartholdi, which was following the crews were of the opin-ion at first that the youngsters from Georgetown were the victors.

A more ideal day for a boat race could not have been wished for. There was an absence of any strong wind and the surface of the river was as smooth as a pond. The contest between these two schools inaugurated interscholastic rowing in Washington and proved successful from the amount of enthusiasm and interest taken in the event despite the loose and unbusiness like manner in which it was man-aged. Fully 300 followers of the two schools and 100 others interested in rowing saw the contest either from the Bartholdi or along the course and at the Po-tomac boathouse.

The race started at 5:10. The Preps had

The race started at 5:10. The Preps had the Virginia side of the river and at the word "Go" these clever little carsmen caught the water several seconds before their beefy antagonists and kept a neat little lead all the way to the Aqueduct bridge. Their stroke was short and quick, but it was clean and backed up by every ounce of strength the youngsters possessed. On the other hand, the Techs gave a sorry looking spectacle of skill. Their rowing was loose and from start to finish they splashed enough to sink their boat, but their weight and strength brought them up even with the Preps about 100 yards west of the Aqueduct bridge, and a few yards further they passed the latter, and it looked as though it was going to be a padlooked as though it was going to be a pad-dle for them the remainder of the course, but McKinney, their coxswain, unexperi-enced like the others in the boat, picked out a course that was way out of the line, and which resulted in their losing at least two lengths. This bad steering gave the Preps a chance to catch up and take a new lease on life, but their coxswain steered them across the river close beside the Techs, losing ground by doing so, but with it all they were a few inches ahead when the Potomec boathouse was reached and it the Potomac boathouse was reached, and it was at this point that the crew eased up, and their rivals passed them. The official time was eight minutes and forty-five sec-

It was a lively meeting, in which excellence of physical condition counted for considerable in the outcome. The soft and describe playing surface caused the balls. siderable in the outcome. The soft and dragging playing surface caused the balls to become heavy, so that both women were compelled to put a lot of muscular effort into their driving. Miss Moore saved herself by working the passes and then shooting the ball over for the ace with great cleverness. Miss Boldt tried to make her attack at the net. She was successful in this is the second set, but was unable to keep up the pace, and was beaten by a close score in the final set.
